Important Charlton Artifacts Conserved!

- Donald H. Weinhardt

As with many communities, prior to their creation of a local historical society, Town government or the Library becomes the repository of historical artifacts. Such was the case here in Charlton, with the Historical Society only being organized in 1963.

The Board of Directors of the Historical Society became aware, in 2002, that there were three artifacts in the possession of the Library, that were in dire need of repair and conservation. One of these was an oil painting the other two were samplers and each was about 170 years old. I was authorized, by our BOD, to contact the Director and Trustees of the Charlton Library, and propose that we borrow these three items. We will research each one, and have them repaired and conserved by professional people in the respective skills, and it will be done at our expense. The Library Trustees approved this proposal at their December 2002 meeting.

Why are these items worthy of our attention and expense? The oil painting is one of Major John Spurr, born in 1783, to General John Spurr and Mercy Dunbar. General John Spurr, among all his accomplishments is remembered as "one of the party which threw overboard the British tea in Boston Harbor". General John Spurr made his first purchase of land in Charlton in 1788, and he became a very large landowner. Major John, the subject of the portrait, was a Major in the militia, justice of the peace, Representative and State Senator from Charlton, and a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1820. He also ran a store and managed a hotel in Charlton Center. In later life he became a farmer, he died in Charlton in 1863. The surviving portrait is not signed but based on the subject's age and attire, it probably dates to circa 1835.

The first of the two samplers was wrought by Mary A. Town, when she was aged 15, it is dated 1833, Charlton Mass. Mary A. Town was born Oct. 12, 1818, to Thomas Town and Sally, per the listing in Charlton, Mass. Vital Records. Thomas Town was a descendant from William Town, as was Salem Town, they are distant cousins. Thus two separate branches of the Town Family tree, both settled in Charlton. Thomas Town is listed in the Federal census of 1800, his house was on Richardson Corner Road, and still stands today.

The second sampler was wrought by Sally Nichols Twiss, in 1830, when she was 24 years old. She was born in Charlton. This sampler is a family record for her parents and siblings, showing birth, marriage and death dates up to the time the sampler was created. Moses first shows up in the 1790 Federal census of Charlton.

In February both of these samplers were delivered to the Textile Conservation Center of the American Textile History Museum at Lowell, MA. The Spurr oil painting conservation was performed by Caroline Adams Frey of North Kingstown, RI.

When estimates came back for this work, it was considerably beyond our expectation. The Friends of the Charlton Library, hearing this, stepped in with a sizeable donation, which was greatly appreciated.

Two of the items required new frames, and two beautiful frames were a donation from Jim Hipkiss and Peg O'Connor, owners of Framer's Gallery in Auburn and New England Graphics in Sturbridge. We thank them both for their on going support.

Please stop by Rider Tavern, on Charlton History Day, Sunday, Oct. 19, from 12 noon until 4 p.m. to see the completed items on display. Aimee Newell, curator for Textiles and Fine Arts, for Old Sturbridge Village, will be on hand to talk about the samplers.

The Decorating Committee

- Joyce Stewart

The fall of 2003 is upon us and the painting has begun! After much consideration and investigation work, the decorating plan for the Black Mantel room and Southeast Bedchamber has been completed and work is in progress. The Black Mantel room had its challenges with four doors in a small space that has been altered several times. We decided to repaint the walls, woodwork and doors with the colors found under several layers of paint (circa 1820-40's). This space will serve as a display area for several of the past prominent families from Charlton (Dresser, Spurr, Town). A grant from the Charlton Cultural Council and Mass Cultural Council supported a replication of the original Harvey Dresser lion fireboard painted by local artist Inez Gornall. This stunning folk art piece will be the focal point in the Black Mantel room. The 1830's original is privately owned and has been displayed at the Boston Fine Arts Museum at the Folk Art Exhibit - 1999-2000 and has been documented in Nina Fletcher Little's books.

Decoration was achieved by the use of paint in varying ways. We will be featuring many techniques of painting (stenciling, free hand painting and graining) in the Black Mantel room and the Southeast Bedchamber. The Bedchamber has the base colors of gray on the woodwork found under the layers of paint. The walls will have the color scheme and design of the McIntire/Bond home located in Charlton. The hard work of Cindy, Nate and Pat Cheever, Cindy Cooper, Glenn Ellis, Harry Howard, Don and Carol Weinhardt have pushed these projects along to the current status. We are very pleased to share our progress (or regression) of decoration in these rooms with all who visit!

Located below the Bedchamber is the Parlor on the Widow's Third side of the tavern. It has received simple swag curtains fashioned out of a period print design in gold and blue. An appropriate room to receive the elegant and fashionable indulgence of window dressing. We are still in search of period appropriate furnishings for this space and welcome any leads on potential candidates!

Revisiting Old Techniques

-Claudia Lacerte

This summer Joyce Stewart, Cindy Cheever and Claudia Lacerte enrolled in classes at the Fletcher Farm School for Art and Crafts in Vermont. Joyce and Claudia were interested in learning the art of vinegar graining and plan to use their knowledge to restore a few pieces of furniture that are at the Tavern using the original graining methods. Cindy chose to expand her skills at spinning. She will find many ways to use her talents to add spun and woven textiles to the Tavern. There will be a display set up at History Day. We hope you come by and ask questions and take a look at the "before" pieces, and come again next year to see the "after"!
